REPORT NO.

1. The airfield was about 4 km northeast of Vologda (59°20'N/39°40'E), Vologda Oblast, just southeast of the road to Sokol (59°13'N/40°0'E).
2. One wooden hangar, one cantonment building and various small houses were at the field. A radio station with two masts and a T-shaped antenna was near the river, 800 to 1,000 meters west of the field.
3. Three single-engine biplanes were stationed at the field.
4. The field, about 2 km square, was about 4 km north of Vologda, just east of the railroad line to Archangel (64°03'N/40°32'E). A road from Vologda passed along the southeastern edge of the field. There were no runways or taxiways.
5. Some cantonment buildings were on the southeastern edge of the field.
6. Planes seen at the field in July 1947 included 18 to 20 single-engine mid-wing monoplanes, short and stubby. In September 1947 there were 10 planes as described and 2 or 3 twin-engine planes with in-line engines.
7. The field, about 1½ x 2 km, was about 3 km west-northwest of the town perimeter, north of the railroad line to Leningrad.
8. There were lighting facilities but no runways, hangars or quatering buildings.
9. About 30 R-5 biplanes and some Il-2s were stationed at the field. Flying activity with the R-5s was heavy.
